To be a good manager, you must be careful to distinctly define the proper boundary (界限) between yourself and your staff. Here are some points to remember:

1. Be clear about the relationship. To maintain the respect of your employees while being friends with them, you must be direct about the nature of your business relationship. This means being clear about what the goals are, how your employees are to help you reach them, and what they can expect from you. By communicating these things clearly, you avoid the risk that an employee can misinterpret your friendship and behave in an unprofessional manner.

2. Be social--to a degree. In most offices, there's usually a lot of social networking, whether it's a Friday lunch or drinks after work. It's natural for managers to be a part of that. Just remember to socialize (交际) with everyone, be careful with the alcohol, and don't be the last one at the party. Also, keep socializing at the office to a minimum. You want to ensure that you are respected as well as liked.

3. Don't fake it. Maybe you want to try to be friends with all your employees, because you think that would strengthen your team. While some management training courses stress that bosses should ask their staff about their personal lives, such as their weekend plans, their families, or their children, such efforts can backfire if the manager is viewed as not being sincere. It's okay to ask occasional questions of staff, but don't make a big production out of it. Getting to know people takes time.

1. To prevent employees from behaving unprofessionally, managers should_____.
 - A) show respect to their employees individual needs
 - B) let them know about their future career development
 - C) set short-term and long-term goals for their business
 - D) make them clear about the nature of business relationship
2. According to Paragraph 3, managers are advised_____.
 - A) to create a friendly work environment for their staff
 - B) to keep socializing with the employees to a degree
 - C) to avoid socializing with their employees after work
 - D) to be the first person to a party or to a gathering
3. Some managers believe they can strengthen their team by_____.
 - A) making friends with all their employees
 - B) attending a management training course
 - C) providing a free Friday lunch to the staff
 - D) encouraging their staff to exercise regularly
4. The word "backfire" in the last paragraph most probably means "_____".
 - A) strengthen the relationship
 - B) start a fire in the backyard
 - C) produced an undesired result
 - D) improve management skills
5. The passage is mainly about the importance of_____.
 - A) management training courses for employers
 - B) proper relationship between managers and staff
 - C) setting business goals for both managers and staff
 - D) being a part of social networking for a good manager
